Software License

The CTS Enterprise Edition products are licensed per server. Two licensing metrics are currently available:

- Named User License. A named user license is required for each individual (e.g., employee, contractor, etc.) authorized to use the program, regardless of whether the individual is actively using the program at any given time.
- Site License. A site license grants an “unlimited” number of users the rights to use the program license for the geographical site licensed. The number of users licensed to use the program is restricted only by the capacity of the machine on which the program is installed and license requirements of associated software required for the program<sup>1</sup>.

For Named User Licenses, there are two categories of users which may be licensed:

- Standard Users. A Standard user is the main user type and can have full rights within the system to create, edit, view, delete, print, import, export, and more. You can increase or decrease the permissions assigned to each standard user at any time.
- Read-Only User. Read-Only users are individuals who only need to view, print, and export data.

<sup>1</sup> CTS Enterprise Edition products require customers to license Oracle supported middleware either TomCat or Web Logic, and the Oracle Database (Oracle Database Standard Edition One, Oracle Database Standard Edition, or Oracle Database Enterprise Edition) to run and implement the Open Range Software product.

Maintenance Agreement

A maintenance agreement is highly recommended for all products. This entitles the customer to product upgrades and updates, maintenance releases, and patches as well as email and phone support during office hours. A maintenance agreement costs 25% of the published list price per year. Maintenance is due annually in advance of the support period.

The starting date of maintenance is always the date when the product was purchased. For example, if you purchase a software on May 1 then your maintenance will also run from May 1, and will expire a year after that. Note that a reinstatement fee will apply if the end user chooses to purchase support at a later date.
